

Georgetown Labor Shed

Expanding from south Austin to north Temple and Killeen, Georgetown's workforce labor shed includes more than 1,300,000 skilled workers who possess a variety of in-demand skill sets. More than 45% of Georgetown residents have a bachelor's degree or higher level of educational attainment – exceeding state and US averages.

Local employers draw from a workforce well outside of the city itself. The labor shed is comprised largely of young professionals with more than a third of the workers between the ages of 25 and 44.

Georgetown provides a strategic benefit for employers seeking a skilled workforce due to its close location to Fort Cavazos. By land size, Fort Cavazos is the largest military base in the United States. The installation sees 800 – 1,000 soldiers transition out of the military and into the private workforce each month.
